

Red Hot Revolution

Arielle Marie

We rejoice in the knowledge that our time of the month has become the time of our lives.

“A woman may develop wrinkles and cellulite, lose her waistline, her bustline, her ability to bear a child, even her sense of humor, but none of that implies a loss of sexuality, her femininity.”

Barbara Gordon, b. 1935,
Television producer/ writer.

Today, the grown woman is no longer the saggy, baggy or blue haired lady we may remember from the old days. She hasn't lost her desire for passion. She hasn't lost her sexuality. Some may have buried it a bit deeper than others, but there is no question the lady still has 'it.' Oh, she had it all along. The Red Hot Revolution simply gave 'it' a name and 'it' will bring her back into focus.

“A woman’s life can really be a succession of lives, each revolving around some emotionally compelling situation or challenge, and each marked off by some intense experience.”

Wallis Simpson, b. 1896, Duchess of Windsor

This revolution is different from the last one we started in the seventies. This movement represents the internal evolution of all women who never stopped feeling a deep passion for living. We didn't need to burn our bras. We didn't need to scream. Silently and gently, the 'red hots' have emerged.
